The communication is aimed at the situations from hospital environment. In the exercises focused on “speaking” and “writing” a student develops his or her language skills in the field of nursing care. A student builds the grammar, especially the usage of grammar structures and enlarges his or her colloquial vocabulary. The aim of the course is to develop the skills necessary for speaking, reading, writing and listening focused on the nursing professional practice.

A student in the group INTERMEDIATE student will establish and enlarge the knowledge acquired at secondary school from lexical and syntactic aspect. The communication is focused on the further model situations from hospital environment, but also on themes about physical and mental health, and on the development of the four language skills. The acquisition of collocations and consolidation of language habits are the focus of the work during seminars. A student trains the selected grammar phenomena based on the work with the texts and is trained to acquire professional nursing lexis, establishes usage of grammar structures, enlarges his or her professional and colloquial vocabulary and terminology, improves communicative competences. Equally develops the skills vital not only for speaking, but also for efficient reading, writing and listening, with the respect to his or her further studies and professional health care practice. Greater emphasis is put on oral and written communication, but also on reading literature from the field of health care in English language.
